Audience So Large That Many Stand Throughout Performance.

TWO OPERAS AT NIGHT

Ther Ring des Nibelungen' moved forward on its slow journey at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday aftermoon when 'Die Walkuere' was sung The extent of the public interest in the annual performances of the four dramas comprising the ponderous tragedy was demonstrated by the size of me audience. All the seats were sold and there was a small army of patient foot soldiers who stood at attention through each long act and took well earned rests in the intermissions by sitting on the floor or the stairways. These who endured were repaid by a good performance, one indeed which had some striking merits. Much was the, of course, to the presiding genius. of course, to the presiding genius, of course, to the presiding genius, our Bodansky, the conductor, and audience showed its knowledge of fact by giving him a long and endastic reception when he was about his seat to begin the third act. ast was one of merit, though has known better ones.
